

FSPA High School Invitational a success

The YMCA Aquatic Center in Orlando was filled with the sounds of splashing water and a cheering crowd on October 8-9. The FSPA High School Invitational Swimming & Diving Meet had more than 1,400 athletes from more than 60 schools compete during this annual event. Total team scores for the Invitational left The Bolles School with another first place finishing. Chiles High School took second with Countryside High School in Clearwater narrowly beating out Palm Harbor University for third.

This event takes many volunteers. Thank you FSPA volunteers Don Archer, Kim Waser, David Pruette, Dave Griffiths, Ken Brown, Lori Bryant, Jason Martin, Kerry Tait, Debbie Pflug, Becky Polk, Annie Marquis, Alan and Ellen Cooper, Eva and Mike Adcock, Ken Parker, Vincent and Frankie Fuggetta, Jackie Arnault, Fran Medernich, Tony Caruso, David Nye, Rick and Malinda Howard, Mitch Brooks, Andy Mallison, Blaine Wisener, Karen and Jayma Hobby, Jordan Bridges, and Daniel Newcomb. Local schools also provided volunteers.

Sponsorships are also important to this event. The Butterfly Sponsors were the YMCA Aquatic Center and Arata Expositions. The Backstroke Sponsors were AquaCal - AutoPilot and National Pool & Spa Research Foundation. The Freestyle Sponsors were Rick's Pool Service and Ken Parker Pools. The Relay Sponsors were Almar/Jackson Pools, Amerigas Propane, AquaBlue Aquatech, Aquasalt, Belleair Pool Supply, Bryant Pools, Florida West Coast Chapter, Freestyle Pools and Spas, Jack's Magic, Lakeland Pool Service, M & M Pools, Olympic Pools, Pools by John Garner, Solar Energy Systems of Brevard and Tampa Bay Pools.

Team sponsorships are imperative in letting these swimmers know the industry supports them. This year the Central Florida Chapter sponsored Boone High School and the Florida West Coast Chapter sponsored Countryside High School, East Lake High School, Northeast High School, Palm Harbor University and Weeki Wachee High School.

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

Team time

Eva Adcock
FSPA President

Teams are a huge part of life. We have our favorite sports team, political team and news team, to name a few. The main ingredient to a team is one other person. As Kareem Abdul-Jabbar once said,

“One man can be a crucial ingredient on a team, but one man cannot make a team.”

When you are part of a team, it's important that everyone follows the leadership of the captain. The captain is not the most important member, but simply the one who will ensure that the team moves in the same direction. Great leaders gather the strength of the group to attract followers. Poor leaders are under the misconception that blowing out someone else's candle will make theirs burn brighter. Chaos and mayhem follow a team that is disorderly. Even the most talented teams may be defeated by their own disorganization. Remembering the unified purpose for which the team was designed is the cure for disorganization. Setting goals is an essential part of this cure.

The first goal of the team should be to bring out the individual talents of each member. It may take time to determine the gift each person contributes and will lead to team building. I found more than 133 million results on Google related to this subject. It provided everything from simple bonding exercises to multiple days at a retreat. The important part is to improve team productivity.

The second goal of the team is to achieve unity. Unity is defined as an undivided or unbroken completeness or totality with nothing wanting. The best teams display an unwavering desire to accomplish this goal. The “nothing wanting” of this definition is attributed to the needs of the team outweighing individual recognition.

I believe Andrew Carnegie summarized it best, “Teamwork is the ability to work together toward a common vision. The ability to direct individual accomplishments toward organizational objectives. It is the fuel that allows common people to attain uncommon results.”

Let's make time for team!

YOUR BUSINESS

Reflect

Wendy Parker Barsell
FSPA Executive Director

November has arrived which means the weather is a little cooler and people are starting to think about spending time with their families during the holidays. Before you get caught up in pumpkin pie and visions of sugar plums, take some time to reflect on the past year.

Review your accomplishments and successes for 2010 both qualitative and quantitatively. Keep in mind these don't have to be blockbuster achievements; they can be slight improvements in sales, improvement in employee efficiency or reduction in administrative costs. Make a list of both big and small items and use it to set goals for next year. Share this with your employees, thank them for helping you get through the year and explain how they'll be part of making next year a success as well. You could ask them for ideas to improve things even more next year. It is still tough for the swimming pool industry but taking time to look at things from a glass-is-half-full perspective should help you bring the year to a close with enthusiasm and excitement about what the possibilities are for 2011.

At the recent FSPA Board meeting I did a quick review of some of your Association's accomplishments this year. This list includes the option for members to apply for and renew their membership online; we had more participants at the annual Legislative Days than ever before; e-mails summarizing Board meeting activity are sent to all FSPA members within seven days following the meeting; the Florida Pool Pro<sup>sm</sup> was redesigned resulting in increased advertising revenue; and a credit card processing program will be in place by the end of the year. Better than expected membership renewal rates coupled with a few other revenue-producing programs helped the Association overcome most of the budgeted deficit this year. We'll be summarizing all of the achievements with our "Year in Review" brochure which is sent to members in January.

In the spirit of Thanksgiving, let's be thankful that we are still in business in the swimming pool industry and the future does look like it is getting better! And, thank you for being a member of the largest swimming pool trade association in Florida, the Florida Swimming Pool Association!

INSURANCE UPDATE

Changes to Certificate of Insurance Form

By David Griffiths, Insurance By Ken Brown

A Certificate of Insurance is most often provided to a third party (the certificate holder) as evidence of insurance the business had in place at the time the form was issued. It includes certain summary information regarding various liability insurance policies carried by a business. It generally includes limits of liability, effective dates and carrier information. The completed form itself is usually provided by an insurance agent representing the policies, coverages and carriers.

A Certificate of Insurance is nothing more than an informational document. The Certificate is not a policy and does not take precedence over the actual policy and coverage forms.

From time to time insurance forms are revised and updated to better reflect their intent and purpose; the changes are legislative and insurance regulatory in nature. This recently occurred (9/1/2010) to the form used in Florida known as the ACORD 25. Changes were made as a result of changes in state insurance department regulatory requirements.

The most significant change to the ACORD 25 can be found in the cancellation text found in the lower right section of the form. In the past there was a blank to insert the number of days notice of cancellation. Not only is the option removed but there is no set number of days notice shown at all. It now reads: Should any of the above described policies be cancelled before the expiration date thereof, notice will be delivered in accordance with the policy provisions.

The reason for this amendment goes back to a statement above. The Certificate does not take precedence and simply cannot alter the terms and conditions of a policy.

In addition it has been made very clear that no insurance agent has the authority to manipulate, change or alter this wording in any way. All insurance agencies are required by their insurance license in the State of Florida to provide this form in the original format it is provided us. What this means is that some certificate holders who are used to having modifications made in certificates will no longer see those modifications.

This also means that we all need to be sure to read the contracts we sign closely and review the insurance wording and requirements to be sure we comply with as much of that contract as possible. We, at Insurance By Ken Brown, are happy to review any insurance requirements section of a contract and advise if current policy forms comply. If they are not, we can tell whether they can be amended and what the additional premium might be to do so. Let us help if we can!

DIGGING UP IDEAS

Deck surface renovations

By Neil Gudgel, Stegmeier LLC

Recent construction trends have often involved deck surface renovations. Paver overlays have proven to be a popular material option in many backyard as well as commercial projects. When planning a paver overlay on an existing deck, considerations such as raising the surface elevation and surface water drainage become all important. Another often overlooked design consideration is in planning for a difference in the rate of expansion of the new material when the project is located in full sun light. This is necessary because many paver materials expand at a much greater rate than the original decking material.

A product designed to raise the elevation of an existing deck drain can provide a valuable solution for these paver overlay projects. Some of these products install mechanically by a series of retaining clips that are attached with self-tapping screws. There are also products that set at dual elevations accommodating 1 ¼" as well as standard brick pavers (2 3/8"). There is also one for 1" pavers that includes the base and top cap. These products are normally stocked by distributors in 10' lengths but are also available in 5' lengths.

When adding pavers to an existing project, many pavers, because of their color and texture, expand and contract at a much greater rate than the subsurface below (whether sand or concrete sub deck), especially when exposed to full sun light. Expanded Polyethylene foam expansion joint material may be the solution to excessive expansion in certain installation. Most expansion joint materials of this type will serve as an appropriate buffer between fixed vertical surfaces such as structural walls and paver surfaces.

One product is a foam material available in rolls that are ¼" or ½" thickness; 1 ½" and 3" height seem to be most popular for paver installations. To install, apply a spray adhesive to one side of the material and when it becomes tacky attach to the wall or other vertical surface. This material can be found complete with a pre-cut "tear away" that when removed provides a void that is a preparation for a color tinted, self leveling joint sealant. Many seasoned paver installers will then dust the still tacky joint sealant with sand before it is cured, making the joint appear like a sanded grout joint. Most distributors in the Florida market carry or have access to these technologies and/or similar products.

ENERGY TALK

Show customers the savings

By Jim Stevens, Crystal Blue Pools, Inc.

Telling a customer that you can save them money by charging them for a more expensive pump is a rather difficult sell. The public is wise enough to doubt vague promises. Once you lose credibility, the sale is going nowhere. Showing the customers actual numbers on what they can save may help gain more credibility.

In an effort to produce a clear and easy to understand cost analysis I have developed a worksheet of the calculations. You may want to put these calculations onto a sheet that you can present to your customers.

First you need to know the present cost of running the existing pump. The present cost of electrical consumption is calculated by multiplying the amps by volts. While I use motor labels for amp usage I also will use an amp meter when in doubt. Take that number and multiply it by .001 to convert to kilowatts. Multiply the kilowatts by the average number of hours the pump is used each day and then multiply by 30 days to get the number of kilowatts used each month. This number must then be multiplied by the electrical cost per kilowatt in your area. The result is the cost to run the present pump for one month.

Next, using the same formula but with the expected amp usage of the new pump, arrive at a predicted cost (be conservative on how much they will save). Now that you can show the customer an estimate of what they pay now to run the pump and an estimate of what they will pay with a new pump, the next step is to subtract the expected results from the present cost to obtain a monthly savings. Finally divide the initial cost of the new pump by the monthly savings to get the number of months until it has paid for itself in electric bill savings. Remind the customer that after it is paid off the monthly savings reduces the operating expenses and their electric bill.

You may want to include a disclaimer on your information to be sure they understand this is an estimate. For example: This is not a proposal; this is a fair representation of expected results. Your actual savings may be less or greater depending on many factors including plumbing, filter size and adjustment of speed.

Explaining the savings and showing the customer the actual numbers can increase their confidence in you and make them comfortable in making the purchase.

Change in government relations staff position

Jennifer Hatfield, FSPA Director of Government and Public Affairs, has transitioned to a consultant position with FSPA. Eva Adcock, FSPA President, said, "We had a diversified and talented task force that met several times and did a fantastic job looking at and anticipating any issues that could come up regarding Jen's change to an independent contractor. All aspects of the change were considered."

Jennifer began at the Florida Swimming Pool Association in July 2006 and has worked with the association on legislative and regulatory issues, building codes and national standards, and its political action campaign efforts. Her responsibilities remain the same and members can reach her at the same e-mail address to have questions about regulation and legislation reach her just as they did before. The FSPA staff can also answer questions regarding most regulation and legislative issues when members call (800) 548-6774.

Alan Cooper, FSPA Immediate Past President, said, "I think this won't have much of an effect and any changes will be minor. Jen is a professional and enjoys our association. Her interests will continue to be for what is in the best interest of the association. This will benefit both of us."

Jennifer began working in her new capacity in September under her new company J. Hatfield and Associates, PL. Jennifer said, "I enjoyed my time as an employee for the association. I look forward to continuing to work with the FSPA in this new role and continue to represent FSPA in government relations efforts."

The last Chapter meeting was held September 15 at the Holiday Inn Town Center. The Chapter was fortunate to have Bud LaBorde speak to the group about customer and employee relations. Bud taught us all about T.A.S.T.E. (Tell the truth, Accountability, Support, Trust, and Energy and Effort); a valuable lesson for us all!

Membership renewals were due June 30. If you have not yet renewed, you have been terminated! Terminations were effective August 31. Remember, you cannot use the FSPA logo on any printed material, Web site, etc. if you are not a member. Don't lose your valuable benefits as parts of this amazing organization. You can still renew! Just a few of the benefits you receive are: Education, discounted insurance programs, Orlando Pool & Spa Show, credit card processing, scholarship opportunities, and discounts on many things such as cruises, holiday cards, GPS program, and QuickBooks software, to name a few. The State office has made renewal very easy with online renewal and different payment plan options.

The annual Oktoberfest was held October 9 at Wild Wing Café. Approximately 70 FSPA members, friends and guests attended the event. The weather could not have been better. There was a 24' inflatable TV screen for watching FSU win and another flat screen TV to watch the Gators play. Great raffle prizes were given away and congratulations to Rick Schmitz, Paradise Pool Service, for winning the 50/50 drawing! Thank you to all who made this event a success. Special thanks to Adrian Sanchez, Jandy, and Tim Sprinkle, Pentair, for their support; we certainly appreciate it.

Mark your calendars! November 18 the Chapter will be hosting a Member Appreciation Event in conjunction with an Energy Table Top and presentation by Jennifer Hatfield and some other key speakers. This will be a free event as a big thank you to those members who have renewed their 2010-2011 membership.

There will be no meeting in December due to the holidays.

There will be a change in your Chapter leadership for 2011. Congratulations to John Garner, Pools by John Garner, for being selected to serve on the Executive Committee for the FSPA at the state level. This new position will no longer allow John to be the president of the Chapter. Jim Batts, The Batts Company, will be the new President; John "Scotty" Scott, Surfside Pools & Spas, will be Vice President; and Dave Pruette, Pruette Electric Services, will remain Treasurer. John Garner will remain on the Chapter Board as Immediate Past President but will not serve on the State Board in a voting position due to his position on the Executive Committee. Mark Turner, Swimcraft Pools, and Rick Schmitz, Paradise Pool Service, have agreed to serve on committees at the state level.

While we talk about this each month, we receive no requests for meeting topics. Remember, this is your Chapter – let your voice be heard.
